

BioFach India together with India Organic 2012
November 29 – 01 December, 2012
Palace Grounds, Shri Krishna Vihar, Mekhri Circle
Bangalore, India

With full power India is growing into Organic

Following the overwhelming response of the last edition of the show held in Bangalore, we are pleased to inform you that NuernbergMesse, Germany jointly with ICCOA (International Competence Centre for Organic Agriculture) announces the 4th edition of BioFach India 2012 together with India Organic for the second time again in Bangalore, scheduled to take place from November 29 – December 01, 2012 at the Palace Grounds, Shri Krishna Vihar, Mekhri Circle, Bangalore, India.

India is currently the largest organic cotton producer among all organic cotton producing countries. India exported 1417.82 metric tons of organic lint cotton from April 2011 through March 2012.

"Leading global brands and private labels are increasing their emphasis on eco-friendly textiles, including organic cotton products, and India needs to make the best of this opportunity". Developing concern for protecting ecology and preventing global warming, especially in the western countries, is boosting the demand for organic and eco-friendly products across all categories. This was also witnessed with India occupying a special place as "Country of the Year" at BioFach 2012 in Nuremberg, Germany. The Indian companies occupied a prominent place in the Textile area with a pavilion presentation and a daily Indian fashion show.

Use BioFach India together with India Organic as your organic platform for local and international sellers and buyers. The world leading trade show network for organic products offers in India a high quality stage for communication, education and last but not least business.
